port operators were forced to respect the ordinances. Not all of those who entered the traffic in Davenport at the beginning of the litner vogue remain, but those who do survive have something at stake in their license and bond, and they are not occasioning any trouble to the officers in charge of etreet traffic. These drivers who travel the bridge are subscribing to the new conditions imposed in Rock Island.

In view of the acquiescence of the Rock Island-Davenport drivers, the inconsistency of the Bock Island-Moline operators is rather puzzling. They must know that eventually they will have to how to the law, and they have elected to follow.
